“ Tomorrow will be your first birthday since you left us.it'll be especially hard for the ones you left behind, but no one more than your mom. I know you know how much you were loved and what a huge hole you left behind. You left your beautiful children and grandchildren here to carry on that red headed tradition, they will not disappoint lol. I also know you know what your mom and Roger and the ones you love, have endured at the hands of idiots whose names are not even worth mentioning. But you also know what a strong bunch you left here and dealing with stupid ain't nothing but a thang. Please reach down and hug your momma tomorrow, let her know you're ok and there's no pain or sadness left in that cute little red headed freckle face. We love and miss you more than you will know. Your mom , that I'm proud to call my sister, and I belong to an exclusive club that nobody wants to be a member of. We brought two boys each into this world and expected to leave it and y'all hear when we left. God had other plans for you and Casey, I don't think either of us will ever understand. Well hold on to all the memories that you left us, and smile at some of them and cry at a lot more. I know I can speak for her when I say that we are grateful for every second we had you and what a privilege it was to be the mommas of two angels on earth. We love and miss you. HAPPY BIRTHDAY CHRIS DAMN WHITE!

“ There are so many promises we make to our children through their lives but, the ones we make to them when you know that you're losing them forever are the hardest and maybe the most important. Chris never asked for much. He wanted me to promise that his kids would be ok, that I would make sure they stayed close and loved each other. He was scared to go but I promised him that I would take care of us and he could go. He asked for very little but, he wanted his infamous profile picture to be on his obituary. I tried hard to make Kerby (really Rainsville) funeral home to make sure that they used that very picture. They did not. Instead you got pics of stupid candles. I guess they don't understand how important every little thing is to a mother who loses a child but, it's all we have left that we can do for them. I will spend the last breath I have to get this fixed for you, Chris. You were the world to us and I just want you to rest in peace. That wont happen until they fix this. Also, everyone please note that they also got the name of the cemetery wrong. You will be laid to rest next to me and your dad at Union Grove not Green Haven. I can hear you right now saying "give em hell, momma!" And you know I will. Love is not enough to say what I feel for you. Life. I felt life with you.
