Russell worked as a rancher, cattle farmer, and textile worker, and as a pump operator for TVA. He enjoyed gardening, raising cattle and farming animals. He loved to hunt, fish, and camp with his precious wife and family, and was a talented guitar player and singer. He loved to play cards, especially rook, and was skilled at playing horseshoes. He could build or repair most anything, was a Jack-of-all-trades, and was willing to help anyone. He traveled with his wife and children to see much of the beautiful USA. When he saw the Grand Canyon for the first time, he jokingly commented "I thought it would be bigger!"

The family wants to express great gratitude to Heartlite Hospice staff, especially Travis Chapman, and Vickie Thornberry Wells for the wonderful
