“ Once in Atlanta I was ill and Patton came to visit me at home. Over 50 years later it was Patton who was ill at home and Pat and I were able to visit with him and his family last month. He of course knew me and some of the things “we boys” did together. By the way, Patton was a skilled craftsman. He rewired my first house in Atlanta. In his memory, Pat and I are making a donation to the American Cancer Society.

“ Patton was dearly loved by his large family. My Mom (one of his sisters) and Dad visited Pisgah often. As I was just a few months younger than Patton, I have many fun memories of his humor. RIP

“ When visiting my grandparents during my younger years my uncle Patton was always there in welcoming relatives to his home. By doing so they gave us a rich experience in meeting our distant relatives and spending time together. We probably took it for granted that Patton would share time and hospitality with us. Patton was always a quiet person maybe because we always were saying that he was the most handsome of the bunch! In later years, it was pretty obvious that Patton was the leader of the clan. A quiet leader of his family I would say. He probably was the only person to know all of us personally over the years.Don Maxwell
