“ In 1976 I was turning 16 and desperately wanted my own car. Uncle Ronnie had just purchased a beautiful 1969 Camaro, silver with black stripes. I had saved up a little money, but nothing near what this car was worth. My dad said that the car was way too expensive and that I did not need that nice of a car because I would probably just end up wrecking it. Even though uncle Ronnie could make a nice profit on the car he wanted me to have it. I got the car and my parents and I paid him back when we could, no financing and no interest. I loved that car and took great care of it with the help of Uncle Wayne, and access to the garage at the car lot. I also learned so many life lessons from this like paying back what I owe, and how to perform vehicle maintenance. Both of these lessons have served me well throughout my life. Uncle Ronnie always shared his smile and encouragement every time I saw him.
